

SEVERAL LAWS NOW REQUIRE ETHICS TRAINING.

Our “Promoting an Ethical Workplace” course helps companies of all sizes build and achieve a strong, ethical workforce culture and comply with applicable federal laws, including the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, Federal Sentencing Guidelines, and the new whistle-blower protections found in the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP) and subsequent TARP amendments.

THINK OF TRAINING AS INSURANCE FOR YOUR COMPANY.

Whistle-blower claims are on the rise, and one of the first things a plaintiff’s or government lawyer will ask for is your Code of Conduct and ethics training to see if you allow employees to share their concerns about possible ethical violations. This is a serious threat, and your failure to show a comprehensive ethics training program could lead to significant civil and possibly criminal penalties.

ETHICS TRAINING IS MORE IMPORTANT NOW THAN EVER.

Today’s tough economy is partially the result of some less-than-ethical business practices in some U.S. companies. As a consequence, the Obama administration and most citizens of this country are eager to punish those who engaged in unscrupulous behavior and simply will not tolerate this kind of unethical conduct any longer. Now more than ever, companies must provide ethics training to ALL employees, and maintain proof of training completion, as a way to rebuild their public image and their business.
